A POLITICAL FEAST.

A Grand Gathering of the Rendjuster Clans at Manossas.

Bourbonism Armigned and Mahone Euloguel by Hon, J. H. Van Auken.

Manassas, VA., Oct. 17.-This has been a great day for readjustment at Manassas. There was a grand gathering of the class at the barbeene here to-day to hear the distinguished speakers advertised to attend. These were Farr, and Gen. Stith Belling. The other engagements of the two latter unavoidably delained them, but Messes, Van Auken and McCanll were present and in eloquent power. Hoth are very effective speakers. Maj. Hawkhurst was on the grounds looking after his interests. To Maj. S. P. Bayly, late congressional candidate in this district, if due much of the credit for the success of the meeting. He is indefatigably working for the good of the cause. Everything here looks in the highest degree encouraging for the

The speeches were excellent. McCaull is one of the brightest, wittiest, and most effec-five speakers in the state. Van Aukon is logical, carnest, and forcible. Together they are a team which the funders in vain endeavor to overcome. Van Auken's culogy on Mahone, which I give below, is a grand tribute to that great statesman, especially so coming from one who was on the other side. Mr. Van Auken said: "At Lyachburg, where high Olympus lifts

At Lyachurg, where high Glympha hits his giant head and props the skies, there was a convocation of gods, of demi-gods, of heroes, and immortals. There were no common people there. Cloud-compelling Jove, with his hyperion locks, was there, and when he nodded the earth shook and trembled. John Goode, the bronze lion of Norfolk, was there to the 'bronze lion of Norfolk,' was there to tall them how a democrat can get to congress with 5,000 majority against him. Massey, 'the mangy cur,' 'the vile hypocrite,' was there to call down blessings on the 'big four.' Ran Tucker was there to exemplify the blessings of free trade. Geo. D. Wise was there to dilate on the beatitudes of a tariff for the protection of home industries and home labor. Every old broken. industries and home labor. Of their opposition to the national banking system, and to resumption? Abandoned!

Of their opposition to the three great underlying measures of the readjuster party—the resuscitation and support of the free school system, the honorable settlement of the debt, and afree ballot and fair count? Abandoned! And they now spring forward at Lynchburg and ratify and accept the three great principes which we had labored for, struggled for, rought for through four years of abuse and vitupetation piled up mountain high, with 'revials of bourbon-funder wrath opened and poured in unstinted measure on our devoted heads. It was a field day for Mahone and the readjuster party in this state when the 'best people' at Lynchburg attempted to steal the fruits of our labors; and we would feel prouder still did we not remember that they are disciples of the school of Talleyrand, whose motto through life was, "words are used to conceal ideas." in the last twenty-five years that those gentry have not at the time opposed. And after it was crowded down their threats at the ballot box by an indignant and an outraged people, they have turned around and 'accepted' it; have jumped on the tailboard of the cart and attempted to keep up with the progress of the country by catching a ride. They remind me of a parcel of tramps, too poor or too stingy to pay their fare, climbing on the trucks of the car of progress and stealing a ride. At the first station which the train reaches they clamber oil, dirty, dust begrinti, and greasy, and hunt around and find a dry goods box, upon which they camp down and proceed to hold a convention. They pass resolutions:

Ah! friends, Virginians, you trusted him in war, you can trust him in peace. He will not finil. The soil of Manassas drank his blood, shed in behalf of Virginia and Virginians. At the smoke-crowned heights of Gettysburg he manifested his coverage and heroism for Virginia and for this courage and heroism for Virginia and for Virginians. Again at the Wilderness, where for six long weary days the whole nation—the millions of the north, and the millions of the south—lay with its ear to the ground, listening for the first note of victory or defeat from out that wast thicket, he manifeeted his bravery and endurance for Virginia and for Virginians. At the smoke canopied crater he periled his life for Virginia and for Virginians, and all this goes for naught, And why? Because he will not now bow his knees to the bool of bourbon democracy, and fall down and worship the golden calf they have erected in sight of the people. Ma-hone—Barbour! Hyperion to a Satyr! Ah, bourbon funders, here is our great leader: Match him if you can."

Among the guests at the celebration of the last month were a large number of piencers of the Pacific slope, and particularly of Oregon. When the ceremonies were concluded these pioneers were invited by the railway company to invade the east, and five hundred and sixteen of them accepted. They Hon. P. H. McCaull, J. H. Van Auken, R. R. scattered upon reaching St. Paul, Minn., and a portion of them reached this city on Monday last, Among them were W. H. H. Davis, L. A. Davis, W. C. Painter, and J. M. Cornwell, of Washington territory, and James Heard, of Idaho territory. The latter is better known under the pseudonym of "Buckskin Jim," and has often been intro-duced to the younger generation under the cover of yellow backed liferature. The party spent the early portion of the day in sight-seeing, and at 3 o'clock were received by President Arthur. The President welcomed them very cordially, and chatted with them for nearly an hour.

Mr. L. A. Davis and Buckskin were found Mr. L. A. Davis and Buckskin were found at the St, James hotel last evening, and, while they protested some, they finally consented to be "chinned." Mr. Heard is now over 70 years of age, and has lived all his life among the wilds. A western flavor, characteristic of his kind is noticeable, but he is undoubtedly a gentleman. He is quite a linguist and a good talker, though inclined to be rather dramatic in manner. He is rather fond of telling stories of his own experience. fond of telling stories of his own experience, and his history had best been given in his own words. "I ran away from England," he said, "when I was but 17 years of age and sailed for the Pacific coast. The vessel was wrocked on the coast of California, and I fell into the hands of Indians, who treated me well. I remained with the Indians until about 1839, when I went to Guaymas in Sonora, where I was taken by Santa Anna's soldiers. Myself and others were put in jail, and remained for six months, suffering terribly, until the British consul had us released upon the celebrated "Yankee Jim" declaring himself an Englishman. We recovered $360 apiece from the Mex-lean government. I then went to Alaska and lived among the Flathead Indians. In 1848, Invest among the Flathend Indians. In 1848, however, the gold fever struck me hard, and I went to California, where in a short time I got rich. I really don't know how much gold I dug, but it was a pile. Since then I have engaged in mining and stock raising. About twenty-four hours generally tires me of any city. I sail for Europe on Saturday, and when I return I shall go direct to Puget sound. The President treated the 'boys' nicely, and we have had a nice time since we left our home. I'd like to have my buckskin suit here and my pony, and you would see fun. Kin I ride? He said that the Northern Pacific railway was a big institution in the west, and, although its completion is young in memory, it had already begun to have to have effect. He said that the population of Washington territory had doubled itself in the past year. "Why," he exclaimed, "there are 3,000 people going into that territory every week."

world, and before long Puget sound will be a nation itself."

Mr. Davis, who is an ex-member of the legislature of Washington territory, and has also held other positions of public trust, stated that the climate itself should help settle the country. "I have not bought an overcoat in thirty years," said he, "and will not do so for 300 years more, for we people never died." He said that there were two classes of pioneers in the western "divide"—the old loggerhead, who never goes into politics, and cares simply for himself and his land, and the younger pioneer, who seeks but the advancement of this territory. These latter have already begun These latter have already begun to make themselves heard, and would before long rule their respective territories. The afternoon added to the large number The afternoon added to the large number in attendance in the morning. Business men of the town who could not leave their stores, their offices, and workshops, took the opportunity of the afternoon to visit the fair grounds, and the attendance was swelled to fully 15,000. The first on the programme was a flat race, gentlemen riders, one mile dash. The entries were Charlie Graham, owned by Harry Harwood, of Baltimere; Joe Alston, by Thomas Swann; won by Charlie Graham in 2:05. The second was a trot to harness against time, mile heats. Entries, Dundee and Clyburn, both owned by Jesse Tyson, of Baitimore. Wen by Dundee, in 2:40. The next was the fox chase, pursued by hounds and gentlemen riders. The dry and dusty condition of the track made it almost impos-sible for the hounds to got the trail, and as a condition of the track made it almost impossible for the hounds to get the trail, and as a consequence this part of the programme was a disappointment to the spectators. The steeplechase was witnessed, enjoyed, and applauded by the immense crowd. In this contest four horses were entered and ridden by their owners—Wooster by T. Swann Latrobe, Joe Alston by Thomas Swann, Tonkaway by E. Jackson, Kiss-Mo-Quick by E. G. Merryman. The race was won by Tonkaway, Wooster second, and Kiss-Mo-Quick third. Great excitement was greated during this contest by one of the riders being thrown from his horse, but the excitement quieted down when it was ascertained that no serious damage was sustained. The next was a trot against time by Red Cloud and Mambrino Rattler, mile heat, won by Red Cloud in 2:37. At night the grounds were illuminated by an electric light, under which took place a race of traction engines, mile heats. The entries were by the Geiser and Frick manufacturing companies, both of Waynesboro', Pa. The race was won by the Geiser engine. It was a close race, notwithstanding an accident to the Frick machine, which retarded its speed. The race will be repeated to-morrow night.

The chariot race followed, and was the feature of the evening, eliciting from the spectators great applause. There were cutered three chariots, each containing two knights
